Enjoy the Moment

As we head into the traditional spring pig buying season, I would like to remind everyone involved in this great industry to take time and enjoy the moment. During this season, families travel to several farms and attend different sales to locate their 2014 swine projects. While selecting the animal that best fits your needs, I encourage everyone to treasure the time you spend with your family. It is apparent more families have become involved in the National Junior Swine Association (NJSA), and they make NJSA events their family vacations.

I was blessed to grow up in a family with three brothers and three sisters. How my parents did not go crazy dealing with seven of us, I will never know. One thing they did do was support our 4-H, FFA and sport activities. I can remember my mother being the delivery and pickup person to get us to and from all the different events and activities, until we obtained our driver's license. Over the years, I can remember my father shutting down the combine to attend one of our football games, and many times it was pretty early in the afternoon so they could travel to an away game. We always knew they were in the crowd providing support for us, and I felt for teammates whose parents did not attend their events. I remember my father commenting how quickly time passes, so you need to take the time and enjoy the moment.

As Sue and I became parents, I tried to remember what my father told me about how quickly the time you get to spend with your children gets away. There were some restrictions about what type of livestock could be raised where we lived, so our daughter, Jamie, was unable to participate in swine projects, but she did have market steers, breeding heifers and market lambs. Today, she talks about the time she and I spent on Saturday mornings cleaning the barns more than she does what award or placing she received. Our neighbors felt I was an overbearing father because I made Jamie help clean the barn. But, I could see the benefits of this activity. Now, she understands the importance of providing good care to livestock and doing the job assigned to the best of her ability. Enjoy the moment.

Stock shows aren't the only opportunity to truly enjoy being with friends and family, though. At last year's Summer Spectacular in Louisville, we were discussing the dominance of Oklahoma University's softball team and how these young ladies cared about their teammates and played well together. One of the comments from their coach struck me hard. He said, whenever the team traveled together, everyone was required to shut off their cell phones and other devices and focus on visiting with the each other. I think this unusual request from their coach created the opportunity that many of us miss. The time we have to spend with our family gets away from us quickly, and I encourage you as parents to shut off your cell phones and ask your children to do the same. Spend that special time talking to your children and encourage them to talk to each other. Don't let the "little things" get in the way of what really matters, and enjoy the moment!

"The time we have to spend with our family gets away from us quickly, and I encourage you as parents to shut off your cell phones and ask your children to do the same."

Hurry if you can “Take your time, hurry when you can.” I heard that often growing up, most commonly from my father, after he got my brother and I up to do our chores in the morning. Needless to say, as a child, when I first woke up, I was a little slow moving. Growing up, things have not changed. I still tend to take my time getting around in the morning. But now, when I wake up, it’s not a chore, it’s a dream, with my career at the National Swine Registry.

When I first started at the NSR in July, I was incredibly nervous. Though I have been a part of this organization since it began, in 2000, and am working with people that I have known most of my life, being in charge of such a large organization, like NJSA, can leave even the calmest person in the world a little anxious. Now, only a few short months into my time here at the NSR, I feel at ease with my new work family.

A year ago, I was just starting my last semester at Purdue University, preparing myself to be an agricultural educator. As I worked through my fall semester, I was fairly certain that I was going to be a teacher, unless some great opportunity opened up. I began student teaching in February, and while I enjoyed it, some rumors began circulating about a job opening at the NSR. Although I began checking the NSR website every day, there were no signs this was true, until the Monday after spring break. I checked the website, after not doing so for a week, and nearly fainted. The rumors were true. My dream job had just opened up. I still remember thinking there was no way it could be possible. How could my dream job open up just as I needed one? It was fate. It had to be. After applying, I remember praying every day, hoping they would consider me. Now when I pray, I thank the Lord for blessing me with a great job, a great family, great friends and great co-workers.

Being part of an organization that cares about you and wants to provide as many opportunities as it can for you is the greatest way to grow up. Now, as a part of it myself, I realize I never knew just how much my predecessors must have cared about this organization. When you look at the growth the NJSA has made since it began, it is astounding. When Brian, Torie and I sit down to make decisions for the NJSA, we think about how to make it better for our members and their families. Working with people like Brian and Torie is one of the best parts of my job.

Looking back on my dad’s favorite phrase, I know he was trying to get me to move a little faster so we could get our work done. However, now when I hear this phrase, I think of all the shows that my family and I used to attend, all the late nights in the barn, all the early morning chores and all the great memories that I made by being a part of the NJSA and Team Purebred.

“After applying, I remember praying every day, hoping they would consider me. Now when I pray, I thank the Lord for blessing me with a great job, a great family, great friends and great co-workers.”

I wish I had thought more about what my dad was telling me years ago. I appreciate what great support I had, because now when I think about it, I realize there is no saying that means as much to me as, “Take your time, hurry when you can.” As I continue working at the National Swine Registry, I know I will use what I learned from this saying each day. And I hope that someday I can affect someone’s life with this simple saying, just as my dad did mine.

Price and value

When I first started showing cattle, my parents and I would often attend the Missouri Angus Futurity to select my show heifer. The whole family would climb into the truck and drive to Columbia, Mo., only to sit on the hard wooden seats in Trowbridge arena watching the whole heifer show, the day before the sale.

Each class, we would take careful notes.

Stout. Big shouldered. Disposition?

The best note any heifer could receive was an asterisk. That meant she made the list – the “I would really love to own her” list.

Bright and early the next morning – sale day – we would rush to grab the sale order and compare it to our catalog notes. And, as always, our starred entries would be found toward the top of the sale order. With a modest show heifer budget that came from a creatively reinvested college fund, we’d set spending limits on each one of our picks, before, once again, finding our way to those wooden seats.

Our first pick would come into the ring, and before we could raise our hand, she’d be over our limit in a series of nods, shouts, flailing programs and “yeps.” One by one, the heifers with the asterisks would run through the ring – each one out of reach.

Disheartened, our family would get up and go to the back to look through the leftovers, yet to sell. Saying things like, “Well, she’s not as thick as I would like, but she’s sound and profiles well.”

We’d usually go home with some member of the Angus Futurity B-Team, but I didn’t look at it as a disappointment. I always reveled in the challenge.

I’d spend hours in the barn brushing, rinsing and clipping my budget-buy trying to make her the best she could be. Maybe it’s because I’ve always been a sucker for the underdogs, but nothing gave me more satisfaction than having good ol’ fashion hard work edge out a heifer that might have been above mine in a sale order a few months before show day.

The truth is, my show heifers weren’t the best – not terrible – just not the greatest money could buy. But what they taught me is invaluable: dedication, responsibility, hard work, good sportsmanship and stockmanship.

“Remember it’s not the price that makes a successful youth project – it’s the value. And young people who are interested in this great industry are invaluable to our future.”

This spring, you are all trying to find the perfect barrow to win whatever show you’ve set out to grab the banner at. No doubt, you’re looking through these pages writing down breeders’ phone numbers and sale dates. You’ll probably log-on and watch them sell high on-line and some will indeed bring a lot of money.

So if you ever get discouraged if you’re outbid during this spring’s barrow hunt, remember it’s not the price that makes a successful youth project – it’s the value. And young people who are interested in this great industry are invaluable to our future.

20 YEARS ON THE EDGE

A look back at the past 20 years of Seedstock EDGE magazine

1996

The cover of the April/May 1996 issue stressed the importance of selecting high-quality hogs at an early age by carefully studying the genetics and talking to the breeders. In 2014, whether raising commercial hogs or show-pigs, it is still important to study hogs and talk to breeders before making selections to add to your herd.

1996

"Your Strongest Salesman," written by Christy Couch Lee, explained how a well-designed advertisement in the Seedstock EDGE is like a salesman hired just for your operation. The article offered tips for breeders to consider to optimize the return from their ad space. Read Stock Marketing on page 22 of this issue to learn about marketing today.

The 2008 Winter Type Conference was the first type conference to be held in Perry, Ga., since 1995. It was held in conjunction with the NJSA Southeast Regional. The Reserve Champion Yorkshire Boar from Lorenzen Farms in Illinois was the sale topper at $20,000, purchased by Center Prairie Genetics of Illinois. The sale totaled $75,150.

Industry News

Hoge inducted to Wall of Fame

Dan Hoge, ag professor and livestock judging coach at Black Hawk College East Campus, will be inducted into the Black Hawk College East Foundation's Wall of Fame at a special ceremony on April 4, at Jumer's Casino and Hotel in Rock Island, Ill.

Hoge's commitment to developing future leaders in the livestock industry is immeasurable. As a nationally-known livestock judge, coach and educator, his experience and devotion to teaching, as well as his dedication to the livestock industry, make him one of the most respected leaders in his field.

For more than 43 years, Hoge has developed and positively influenced more than 4,000 animal science students, including more than 700 young people who have participated on Black Hawk College livestock judging teams. His students have gone on to become leaders in the industry as judges, producers and educators, some serving as directors of national livestock associations and publications.

The winning record at Black Hawk College East Campus attracts many students to look at the program, today. However, it's Hoge's personality, devotion to his students and commitment to building future leaders of agriculture that causes students to accept their admittance letters and make Black Hawk College East Campus their "home."

Steve Spivey, chairman of the Black Hawk College East Foundation and a member of the 1975 team, says, "Hoge has grown and nurtured the livestock programs at Black Hawk East into the preeminent community college program in the nation."

Spivey says Hoge's coaching and teaching style is to take a positive approach with students, emphasizing what a student is doing right before explaining what needs to be done better or needs improvement.

"But even with his easy style and manner, he can be firm and demanding in his low-key, matter-of-fact approach," Spivey added. "He constantly gets students to perform not just at their best, but often beyond their capabilities."

To recognize his impact on the livestock judging program, the Foundation is establishing an endowed scholarship in his name which will provide financial assistance to livestock judging students for many years to come. The Dan Hoge Livestock Judging Scholarship will be invested with only the interest earnings to be used to fund scholarships for livestock judging team students for generations to come.

"As the cost of tuition and fees continues to increase, the level of state, federal and local support of education has remained stagnant or declined," Spivey said. "Providing financial assistance through merit and need-based scholarships will allow the livestock judging program to continue to attract the very best students and carry on the tradition of excellence."

Mark Gordon, owner of Rockin G Land and Cattle and manager of Croft Fertilizer Service Inc., says he admires Hoge's professionalism and passion for education.

"There is not a day that goes by, either at the ranch or at the fertilizer plant, where decisions don't need to be made or action taken that affect the well-being of these businesses,” Gordon says. “Thanks to Hoge’s guidance, I feel confident I’m making the right decisions.”

If you are interested in learning more about the Dan Hoge Livestock Judging Scholarship and how you can help make a difference in the lives of future livestock judges, please contact Liz Breedlove, Executive Director of the Black Hawk College East Foundation, at breedlove@bhc.edu or 309.854.1715.

Obituaries

Charles 'Chuck' Dill
1954-2013

Charles Calvin 'Chuck' Dill

Charles Calvin 'Chuck' Dill, a well known farmer and swine producer of southwestern Tippecanoe County, Ind., died surrounded by his family, Dec. 22, following a courageous battle with cancer. He was born Feb. 24, 1954, in Lafayette, to the late Chester W. Dill and Doris Dill, who survives. He married his sweetheart, Colleen P. Schilling in St. Ann Church, Lafayette, April 20, 1974, and she survives.

Dill was proud to be raised on the family farm in Jackson Township and graduate from Southwestern High School with the class of 1972. Dill attended the Purdue University Agricultural Winter Short Course in 1973 and may not have attended many classes. He was a farmer from birth and continued to farm and raise showpigs, till the end. Dill had a keen knack for raising excellent quality showpigs and was always ready to share his knowledge and experience, whether it was asked for or not. He was involved with 4-H in Tippecanoe County for more than 34 years. He was a director, swine superintendent and 4-H Leader. He had been involved in the Young & Guard Showpig Auction for more than 30 years. His showpigs won championships from the county levels to the state fair. The past several years, Dill enjoyed working with his son-in-law 'Pokey' raising pigs, because he appreciated having someone he could tell what to do. Dill was a member of the National Spotted Swine Association and St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church in Attica.

Dill was a legend. In the Lafayette area, all you needed to say was "Chuck" and no one would ask, "Chuck who?" To hear the name Dill would just make you smile. There are so many stories, but so little time. His quick smile, sharp wit, selflessness, fairness, willingness to help, ability to turn a conversation cross-ways and his jokes, endeared him to everyone. He was a friend to everyone and the world has truly lost 'one of the good guys.'

Surviving along with his wife and mother are two daughters; Chrissy Suzette (Andy 'Pokey') Wise of rural West Point, Ind., and Courtney Dawn Dill of Cincinnati, Ohio; grandson, Jackson 'Stewie' Wise; sister, Nancy (Stan) Thayer of rural Lafayette, Ind.; in-laws Don and Carolyn Schilling of Lafayette, Ind.; and brother-in-laws Steve (Laraine) Schilling of Lafayette, Ind., and Scott (Cheryl) Schilling of Claredon Hills, Ill. Also surviving are an enormous group of people privileged to call Chuck their friend. He was preceded in death by his father, grandson, Zacary, and sister, Bonnie Jean.

Funeral services were held Dec. 27, at St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church, Attica, with Father David Rasner officiating. Burial followed at Sugar Grove Cemetery, near New Richmond.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials be directed to the Tippecanoe County 4-H Exhibit Association.

Nelda Christian
1936-2014

Nelda Cobb Christian

Nelda Cobb Christian of Ames, Iowa, passed away Jan. 9 at her home. She was born to the late Numa and Leota Cobb, Jan. 1, 1936, in Gibsonville, N.C. Christian graduated from McLeansville High School, in 1954, and received a baccalaureate from University of North Carolina-Greensboro, in 1958. She married the late Dr. Lauren Christian in 1959. They lived in Madison, Wis., and Knoxville, Tenn., before making their home north of Ames for the next 50 years.

Christian was a home economics and physical education teacher until she retired, in 1961, to become a mother to Chandra, and later Russell. She was active in sports, volunteer coaching in Gilbert, 4-H, Story County and Iowa State Fair activities and the swine industry. In particular, she was a representative of the Iowa Purebred Association for the Pork Board, served on the Iowa Pork Producers and was a driving force behind the "Taste of Elegance," a program of the Iowa Pork Tenderloin Judging Committee. She was dedicated to youth development and started the Gilbert grade school girls' softball and basketball programs, served as a volunteer 4-H leader for more than 20 years and was on the Story County Fair Board for many years. Her outgoing, curious and welcoming nature was notable and especially evident in her (and Lauren's) international travel, as well as her creating a family of colleagues, graduate students and foreign visitors. Christian never met a stranger, and she lived life on her own terms.

Christian is survived by daughter, Chandra Christian of Efland, N.C., and Russell Christian (Chris) of Mount Horeb, Wis., and grandchildren Clementine and Django Christian of Mount Horeb. She is also survived by brothers Dr. Numa Watt Cobb II (Carolyn) and Dr. Steven Cobb (Deb) of Greensboro, N.C., and Eric Cobb (Sandra) of Gibsonville, N.C. She is preceded in death by her husband, Dr. Lauren Christian, in 1998, sister Dolphine (Bug) Cobb Wright, and parents Numa Cobb and Leota Cobb.

Funeral services were held at Gilbert Lutheran Church in Gilbert, Iowa, on Jan.15.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to the Story County 4-H Endowment, in memory of Nelda Christian, at the Iowa 4-H Foundation, Extension 4-H Youth Building, Iowa State University, 50011-3630.

Swine Health Guide

Porcine Epidemic Diarrhea Virus (PEDV) – What Is It?

Background:

- PEDV is caused by a virus (Coronavirus) that is related to transmissible gastroenteritis (TGE) virus.
- PEDV only infects pigs (NOT humans or other livestock).
- This is a new virus to the U.S. and was first confirmed in the country on May 17, 2013.

Clinical signs:

- In previously naïve herds, PEDV is similar to TGE and includes:
 - » Severe diarrhea in pigs of all ages
 - » Vomiting
 - » High mortality - almost 100% in preweaned pigs

Diagnosis: Requires sample submissions to a diagnostic laboratory (contact your veterinarian).

Transmission: Oral contact with contaminated feces. The most common sources of infected feces are pigs, trucks, boots, clothing or other fomites.

Incubation period: (time from exposure to clinical signs) Only 12-24 hours.

Shedding: (amount of time animals can infect others) Up to 3 to 4 weeks.

Immunity/Protection:

- No cross-protection with between TGE and PEDV even though both are Coronaviruses.
- Maternal protection through colostrum from previously exposed sows can be quite effective.
- No protection is long lasting (herds can re-break).
- Vaccine studies are in progress.

Treatment: Supportive care through hydration. Provide clean, dry, draft free environment with access to high quality drinking water (electrolytes may be beneficial).

Prevention: Limit cross contamination with any suspected pigs' feces.

- Clearly define and communicate a Line of Separation which marks the separation between your facility, transport vehicles or the outside / inside of your production site.
- Contact your veterinarian and enhance biosecurity procedures.
- Biosecurity of transportation vehicles is important; they should be clean, disinfected and dry.
- Several disinfectants have been demonstrated to effectively inactivate PEDV, such as formalin, sodium carbonate, lipid solvents, and strong iodophors in phosphoric acid.
- Replacement breeding stock should originate from a negative herd.

Challenges to Industry: Infection with PED can create tremendous financial losses to a pork producer.

For more information on biosecurity and PED: pork.org or contact a veterinarian.

Diseases like to hitch a ride, separate yourself from cross-contamination!

The organisms that cause disease in pigs (bacteria, viruses and parasites) can survive in different types of materials. Organic matter (shavings, manure) or water, mud or snow can carry diseases on boots, clothing, tires, undercarriages, trailers, shovels, winter panels, sorting panels and people can infect healthy pigs. Other activities, such as walking into a contaminated barn or packing plant can increase risk for disease spread because boots and trailers can become contaminated with diseases the farms you serve are trying to keep out. Assume every site you touch is a risk. Do not be responsible for transferring this disease.

Swine Health Guide

Swine Health Recommendations: Exhibitors of All Pigs Going to Exhibits or Sales

With the animals being commingled at an exhibition, show or sale, spreading disease is a risk. The recommendations listed apply to all swine at an exhibit or sale that are physically on the premise. Having a plan in place to identify and handle sick animals properly will help reduce the chance of disease spread.

In preparation for the exhibit or sale:

Consult a veterinarian to understand and implement applicable biosecurity and swine health practices; keep the veterinarian's phone number in your barn with your pig's papers and if possible, in your cell phone.

Have a premises identification number for your farm or where the pig(s) are housed (required for PQA Plus® certification or state equivalent)

Utilize an individual, readable identification method for each pig:

- Individual identification helps accurately and quickly identify a pig in the event of a health issue, validation of ownership or for other exhibit needs; papers can get lost or misplaced, but individual identification will remain with the pig
- Refer to the exhibit organizers and the State Veterinarian for specific requirements for individual animal identification

Become familiar with the clinical signs of a sick pig (such as fever, off-feed, lethargy, nasal discharge, cough, “thumping” or hard time breathing, and diarrhea).

- Normal rectal temperature of a pig = 101.5° - 102.5° F
- Pigs can't sweat, they need help staying cool on hot days.
 - › During hot weather a pig's temperature may be elevated.
 - › If its temperature is raised, allow the pig to cool off and re-take the temperature in 15 minutes.
- Work with your veterinarian if your pig becomes sick.

How do I take my pig's temperature?

1. Restrain your pig to avoid injury to you or the pig
2. Use a thermometer to measure temperature:
 - a. Digital – insert into the rectum; push the button and wait for the beep; read temperature
 - b. Mercury – shake down the thermometer so the red line is not showing; insert into the rectum of the pig and wait 30 seconds before reading the temperature
 - c. Laser: point the laser at the space on the skin behind the ear and read temperature

NOTE: Laser thermometer may not be as accurate as rectal thermometer

Digital Thermometer

Some diseases can transmit from humans to pigs and from pigs to humans, so it is important to not go to the exhibition or show if you or your pig is sick.

Make sure that you have all of your equipment, including your show box and its contents, clean, disinfected and ready to go prior to the exhibition. Do not share any equipment with other exhibitors once at the exhibit.

Fill out the appropriate paperwork for the exhibition including health certificates

One SOW AT A TIME

by Katie Maupin

The Danner family has a simple philosophy when it comes to breeding hogs – you breed one sow at a time. That’s what they have built their Purple Power Boar Stud in Chalmers, Ind., around. To them, every sow counts – no matter who owns her or how likely she may be to produce the next high-dollar boar or major champion.

Nothing makes the Danner family happier than hearing news that their boars sired champions; such was the case when a Duroc barrow bred by Joe Eggers and Sampson Showpigs won Grand Champion Overall Market Hog at the 2014 Sioux Empire Farm Show. He was sired by Flash Drive.

The Danners saw the true value of this philosophy when they honored a two-dose contract with a local breeder who had three sows for his children's 4-H project. He'd ordered doses of their most popular red boar at the time, OJ, weeks in advance. OJ was so popular that the Danners couldn't fill all of the demand for his genetics. Several notable, well-established breeders wanted those two doses that were promised to one-third of that gentlemen's sow herd, but the Danners stood by the reservation. And that one Duroc sow – the only one that local 4-H father owned – produced the Champion Duroc Gilt at the 2005 Indiana State Fair. Amara Danner drove her to the banner.

Chris Danner, the patriarch, will tell you that incident is just one example of how caring about every sow and every customer – no matter their size or history – has helped his family carve out a living in the business.

"Every customer is a valued customer – no matter how big or small," he says. "We adopted that motto of breeding one sow at a time, because you never know which sow and producer will make that next champion."

Perhaps, the Danner family can identify with breeders, both big and small, because they come from a humble background. Chris will tell you, he grew up without much money, and both he and his wife, Susan, came from cattle backgrounds and exhibited cattle as 4-H projects growing up. By 2001, the family wanted to start their own agriculturally-driven enterprise with the goal to be self-employed, small business owners.

"The dear Lord granted me with the gift to be able to pick out good livestock, and our daughter showed pigs for the first year at our county fair, in 2000, so it just made sense," Chris says. "We didn't have money for a cattle farm, so we got started in the pigs."

In 2001, the Danners and a partner created the Purple Power Boar Stud, and in 2002, the Danners ran the business by themselves. It wasn't easy, and both Chris and Susan worked full-time.

"When we started this business, we built it with the mentality that whatever money we borrowed we would be able to pay off within five years with our full-time jobs," he says. "We borrowed every dollar that it took to start this. We had no savings. We had no checking. We had no real money behind it – no additional investors, other than partners on boars."

By 2004, they had maxed out their line of credit, and it was sink or swim for Purple Power. That year was the pivot point for the entire operation, and the boars Chris would bring back to Chalmers, Ind., would decide the fate of their entrepreneurial ambitions.

"That spring, I bought a Yorkshire boar out of our budget," Chris says. "When we did that, to be honest with you, we maxed out our line of credit, and we literally had boars on credit cards. I would not suggest for people to do that, but that is how far we extended ourselves. That year, it was either make it happen or quit the business.”

That boar was Infinity, and when Chris jumped him off the trailer and let Susan know about their tab, she was furious. In their 27 years of marriage, that was the most upset Chris had ever seen his wife.

“I was told not to spend more than $1,000 that day,” he explains. “And I paid $3,200.”

If you ask Susan just how mad she was, she’ll tell you she was a 10.

But then something funny happened. That $3,200 budget-buster, who’d be mere pocket change for some, sired the $50,000 New Beginnings boar and people took notice.

If you ask them how, they’ll tell you with goals, a little luck and the grace of God.

Susan has a saying that your goals should be written in concrete, but your plans in sand. That’s how they operate. Since the beginning, Chris and Susan wanted to be self-employed, but it took seven hard years full of long hours to pull it off.

Susan came on board with Purple Power full-time on Aug. 7, 2004, but their goal had always been to support the whole family with the business. On Dec. 17, 2008, the family sat around their table to talk about their goals for the coming year. Number one was for Chris to be onboard whole industry is faced with challenges and changes,” Chris says. “With things like $8 corn, $4 LP gas and herd health issues, you have to have faith things will continue.”

In addition to their faith, several members of this industry helped guide them along the way. Kent Brattain essentially gave them their first red boar to promote and Todd Harris’ semen contracts for Autumn Rose boosted their cash flow enough to keep them afloat in the beginning.

Today, the Purple Power spring catalog will hold 43 boars with more than three-quarters of the offering being purebred. The family’s knack for finding breed changers will “We’d rather have hogs that breed on than sell lots of semen. Even if they sell a lot of semen, if they don’t work, then you’re moving backwards. Not that every boar we’ve purchased has done so, but that’s always our goal.” — Susan Danner

Not only was Infinity siring champions, but several of the boars they’d purchased that summer were breeding on, including a Hampshire called Dr. Bob, who sired a $40,000 boar, and OJ, a Duroc boar that sired countless winning red gilts and kept their phone ringing.

That year, at the brink of breaking, the Danner family assembled one of the most memorable boar batteries in Purple Power’s history.

with Purple Power full-time. They accomplished that the next day.

“Goal setting is a positive thing, but praying about it is even more important,” Chris says.

While they don’t claim to be perfect, the Danners believe that Christ has guided their path, and their faith will continue to move them forward in the future.

“We’re among a time, that this continue to shape the industry.

“When I was a kid, I had to look at feet and legs and squareness of structure and angles. That is where truly good hogs come from – you build them from the ground up,” Chris says. “Do I have a knack for it? I don’t know. I guess if I do, it’s only because the good Lord granted me a gift.”

That gift has arguably found more genetic giants at bargain prices than any other in recent history. Some examples include, the $6,500 Flash Drive that sired the $97,000 Iconic, the $1,400 Balance that created Blake’s Reserve Barrow in Indiana and the $675 steal called Crackin’ Down that produced three of the four class winners at the North American and the Reserve Champion Duroc Gilt at the 2014 San Antonio Junior Stock Show.

“I don’t think that dollars dictate quality,” he says. “Dollars dictate ownership.”

As Susan will tell you, a pedigree can often determine quality. In fact, the paper is one of the first places the family looks when it comes to selecting their next herdsires. Chris explains, there is simply more value in purebreds. They're more predictable, and their genetics hold their value for a longer period of time at Purple Power. Most importantly, they breed on.

The last time Amara drove a hog into the show ring, he was named the Champion Duroc Market Hog at the 2010 American Royal. Her entry, bred by Rodibaugh, was sired by Manual Labor.

"We'd rather have hogs that breed on than sell lots of semen," Susan says. "Even if they sell a lot of semen, if they don't work, then you're moving backwards. Not that every boar we've purchased has done so, but that's always our goal."

Backwards is not a direction the Danners will move. They will continue to push forward, keeping future generations in mind as they forge ahead with a hands-on approach, low overhead costs, competitive pricing and good service.

Their youngest, Blake, already has big plans for the future of Purple Power at 15-years-old. After graduating Purdue with a degree in ag business and gaining work experience off-the-farm, he wants to return to Chalmers to take the helm by 2028.

"He already tries to run Purple Power," Chris laughs. "But that will make me 65, and love for production, Chris thinks, she may if they agreed to add more sows.

Both Blake and Amara have learned a lot from growing up as part of their family's operation.

"I've learned, if you're honest with somebody, they will always come back to you in this business," Blake says.

He loves the competition of picking out the next great sire, a game he claims his mother, Susan, is currently winning.

Amara loves watching all of their hard work pay off. Her fondest memories are actually the days when nothing goes right and everyone is worked into a complete tizzy, because it makes the success that much sweeter, especially knowing they did it as a family.

"No matter what happens at the end of the day, I know my family will always be 100 percent behind me," she says.

Nate Lenig has also learned a lot from the family. As their intern for the last two years, he has been both interviewed and fired by their then 13-year-old son in the same day, but most importantly he has found a second family. Chris has taught him how to select swine and pushed him to join the Purdue Livestock Judging Team. Within a year, Lenig went from dead last to the 4th high swine individual at the American Royal. Susan showed him how to provide great customer service, and Blake taught him all about working with a boss that expects perfection.

"The Danners just do things right," he says. "They're good people who you can trust, and that gets them a lot of respect in the industry."

As long as there is a Purple Power, customers can expect to hear Susan's warm voice on the phone and Chris' sometimes disarmingly honest appraisal of the industry.

"Our customers will always be the most important thing to us," Chris says. "A boar can never sell semen himself. People may call you about a boar, but that boar doesn't answer the phone. He doesn't collect himself. And he doesn't get semen in a bottle."

One of the Danner family's proudest moments was when Blake garnered Reserve Grand Champion Market Barrow at the Indiana State Fair. His entry was sired by Balance, a $1,200 herdsire purchase. Blake's biggest goal is to win again, and he has four years left to compete in the junior ring.

that's not near soon enough."

Their daughter, Amara, is finishing college. Currently, she doesn't have plans to return to Purple Power, but with her

Stock Marketing

BY KATIE MALPIN

There are more than 150 advertisers in this issue of the Seedstock EDGE. Each seedstock breeder, showpig producer, feed company and auctioneer wants their ad to come to the forefront, to be the one that readers will instantly find and always remember.

But, what's the trick to making a message stick? How do you know where to start when it comes to "stock marketing?"

The Seedstock staff visited with some of the most respected marketing minds in the industry to find the keys to creating a name for yourself.

The first step to building a brand buyers will remember is to be yourself.

"You shouldn't be afraid of being who you are," Jackie Lackey, owner of Encore Visions, says. "So many people think they have to have loud, bold advertising. We get into a you and what you do," she says.

The first step to doing so, according to Lackey, is to reflect upon your operation and ask yourself who you really are and what you want to portray. After answering those tough questions, the sky is the limit.

"Don't be afraid to push the limit," Robinson says. "You don't have to do everything like everyone else is doing it. Have designers build a logo and a brand that is distinctive."

Jesse Heimer of Heimer Hampshires believes finding an identity has been one of the most important aspects of his marketing efforts.

"I think those are probably my best words of advice," he says. "I think a lot of people, instead of finding their own identity, try to be someone else."

Let's go logo

Once you've answered some tough questions and visited with a design company of your choice about your goals, it's time to figure out how much

5 percent of their annual sales on advertising each year," Rachel Cutrer, owner of Ranch House Designs, says. "So if you are selling $100,000 worth of livestock in 2013, you should spend between $1,000 and $5,000 in advertising in 2014. Lots of times, we see people throwing money away in advertising without a good plan of how to spend that money."

After doing the math, some of you may be wondering just what you can invest in to kick off your advertising campaign, and for people just starting out, Robinson always recommends a logo.

"Just go get a logo designed," she says. "From there, if you don't think you have enough showpigs, or you don't think you can justify having an ad in the magazine or putting a website up, start a Facebook and put your logo up to start building brand recognition."

Cutrer agrees, taking to the web is a very cost effective way to start.

"Currently, we're recommending that people start with a website for their marketing materials, due to the affordability and the unlimited options copy-cat mentality, because we think if that is what successful people do, then that's what we need to do."

Lackey's goal, when building a brand for a new client, is to have the design mirror her client's personality, so when someone views their website, advertisement or Facebook page and gives them a call, the person they talk to is relatable to the marketing.

Steva Robinson, owner of Novel Designs, cringes when her clients say they want their logo, website or ad to look just like someone else's.

"It can be good to know that, because it can help us understand the look and feel that you want. But we don't want to create something that is just like your neighbor's. We want to make something that really showcases money you can spend to market your products and where you will get the most impressions for each penny.

for the number of photos and content," she says. "Facebook is huge right now because it is very inexpensive, if not entirely free. But a Facebook page needs to be tied to a website, since Facebook messages are very short lived.”

Robinson and Cutrer both suggest listing your website with some online directory such as thepigplanet.com or showpig.com to drive people to your site.

This means, according to Lackey, you shouldn't be afraid to be predictable.

“So many of our advertisers jump from look to look and message to message, they never really establish a derstand their marketing goals and have an idea of what they want to accomplish by spending their money. Lackey adds, setting goals for what you would like to accomplish, what you would like people to perceive about your brand and when it is important for you to advertise can make advertisements more effective.

Cutrer also sees the value of proper planning. She encourages all of her clients to establish realistic marketing goals and evaluate them on an annual or semi-annual basis.

“For example, maybe your goal is to increase the number of head you sell each year, maybe it's to increase your average price per head or maybe even to expand your market from a local to a national client base,” she says. “Then, develop your advertising and promotion based around those goals.”

Cutrer recommends asking buyers how they heard of your operation and keeping track of how many sales and inquiries came from each aspect of your marketing. This information can help you evaluate the effectiveness of your marketing and messaging, and if it isn't working, you can find other options.

“One of the most common mistakes that I see people make is spending advertising dollars without a plan,” she says.

As Travis Platt of Roanoke, Ind., will tell you, planning advertising has been a key to the success of thepigplanet.com, Upperhand Genetics and Platt Showpigs.

“They make fun of me for the way I come up with my ads,” he laughs. “But I draw it all out on a piece of paper, exactly the way I want it, as far as picture placement, sayings and captions. You just have to advertise as much as you can, advertise key things and keep things fresh on Facebook, your website and in print.”

Just as crucial to Platt as planning his advertising is to have a good relationship with a marketing and design company. Robinson serves as “...I still enjoy receiving the magazine and seeing things in print. Print is not dead.”

— Jesse Heimer

After establishing your presence online, you can select print advertisements to direct people to your website and social media accounts.

Print advertisements have long been a favorite of Heimer's.

“I'm a traditionalist,” he says. “Growing up as a kid, I looked forward to receiving the Seedstock or the Hampshire Herdsman like no other publication, and I still enjoy receiving the magazine and seeing things in print. Print is not dead.”

Regardless of where you're paying to promote your brand, the key is consistency.

Keep consistent

“Consistency is important in any advertising campaign,” Cutrer says.

“But it is probably more important to have a consistent brand image and corporate identity, rather than saying the same message in every ad. For example, choose a corporate color scheme and stick with that in all of your materials.”

While the messages of your ads may change depending on the season and what you have to promote, consistency makes your brand recognizable.

“Think about it this way – if you saw two soda cans side by side – one red and white and one green and white, you could probably easily distinguish them as Coke and Sprite,” she says. “Livestock advertising should be the same. You should use colors, styles and identity to help people instantly recognize your brand.”

brand,” she says. “I think part of the reason is when they hire a designer, they don't feel like they're getting their money's worth unless they come up with something new all the time. That's so detrimental, in my opinion, to the brand of their operation.”

It pays to plan

Any marketer knows the four 'Ps' to a successful marketing mix – price, product, placement and promotion – but there's a fifth 'P' to consider when building a brand: planning.

Proper planning is often the difference between solid, strategic promotion and a half-hearted attempt. In this industry, driven by wins and high sellers, it is often easy to advertise based on impulse, a knee-jerk reaction to recent success, but as Lackey will tell you, this isn't the only time you should advertise.

“In a fast-paced industry, planning should be first and foremost to avoid rush decisions having to be made to meet last-minute deadlines” she says. “Many of our breeders advertise when they have a big win or they sell high. Oftentimes, that is the least crucial moment for advertising due to the natural press that follows. They need to focus their efforts on advertising year-round, regardless if they're winning or not.”

By planning an advertising strategy for each year, producers can better una sounding board for new concepts that Platt has, and they often bounce ideas off of each other when coming up with new promotions.

Build relationships

This brings us to the last part of successful advertising – building relationships. One sure way to do so is to have an honest brand that reflects your values to potential customers, but just as importantly, you should also build a relationship with the marketer of your choice so you can work together to build a brand that is right for you.

“There are a handful of design firms out there that offer marketing services to livestock and showpig producers,” Robinson says. “We all do a nice job. Pick the company that you think most closely matches your brand and what you want to portray because they can help you meet your goals.”

Lackey sums up the commitment to good advertisement designed to build relationships.

“Well-planned and executed advertising and marketing is worth every penny,” she says. “Poorly planned, rushed advertising is a complete waste of money. In such a competitive market, advertising is imperative. Since it accounts for such a large portion of the budget and dictates much of how your operation is perceived, it deserves time, effort and thought.”

KEYS TO A GOOD PRINT AD

by Rachel Cutrer

The three most important things are the photos, typography, and content. If you don't have high quality ❶PHOTOS, you are doomed from the beginning. ❷TYPOGRAPHY – or font selection – to me, is the single most important element of the design process because the basic goal of any ad is to be read. Lots of people think the goal of an ad is to “get noticed” and may think that all you need is a cool-looking ad. But getting noticed just isn't enough. For an ad to be successful it needs to be first read, and more importantly remembered by the client. Font selection and legibility are crucial to achieve these two goals. And finally, your ❸CONTENT should be well thought out. Every ad needs a headline that explains the main idea of the ad, a few sentences of ad copy to tell the reader the message you want, and finally a call to action. A great ad is one that looks good, gets noticed, and gets a response from the reader.

Feeling Lucky?

by Ann Fry

If barn walls could talk, countless show-winning secrets would be out. Most people rely on closely guarded rations, feed ingredients and training techniques to get them a step closer to that purple banner. But for some, success is linked to something a little more unexplainable – a superstition.

Find a four leaf clover and carry a rabbit's foot while crossing your fingers and prepare for your good luck to start.

Superstitions like these have been people's answer to why good or bad happened to them since the Roman Empire ruled. While you may not find anyone searching for clover in the show ring, there are some serious good-luck superstitions floating around the barn.

Grant Colvin

The Colvin family of Russellville, Ind., has a limited number of pictures of their boys showing hogs, not from a lack of photo opportunities, but rather because they wouldn't let their mother carry her camera.

"We always did better when she didn't have it at the shows taking pictures," Grant Colvin says.

This is just one of many superstitions

Grant Colvin can often be found showing in his lucky blue Chaps shirt and dark blue jeans.

Colvin has developed over his show career. One starts before he ever heads to a show. When he and his family decide which pigs are going to be shown, the pigs get moved to a certain pen.

"We consider that our lucky pen because multiple hogs have done well that have been kept in that pen," he says, on how they developed that ritual.

But the superstitions don't stop when he heads to a show. When he arrives in the barn on show day, he has to have his show clothes on: a blue Chaps shirt and dark blue jeans. And before going in the ring, he always listens to five certain songs.

If he doesn't stick to his normal routine, Colvin loses his confidence in the ring. But when he follows his superstitions, it's like finding a penny heads up – good luck is sure to come his way.

"Prior to showing in Kansas City, I made sure I left the hotel with my show clothes on. An hour before going in the ring I listened to the same five songs: 'We Own It,' 'Till I Collapse,' 'Cinderella Man,' 'Not Afraid' and I can't reveal the last one or my secret would be known. I ended up winning my class, Champion Yorkshire and Reserve Grand Champion Market Hog," Colvin says.

Maddie and Olivia Caldwell

Much like a TV show, each show season for Maddie and Olivia Caldwell of Elmwood, Ill., has a theme song. At the beginning of summer, the girls designate a song to be played as they pull in to each show they go to.

"We developed this superstition a couple of years ago, when we named a gilt after Adele and played her song 'Rolling in the Deep' in the barn quite often," Maddie explains.

When they get to a show, the Caldwell family likes to see double digits in something related to the show, whether it's in the hotel room number or one of their exhibitor numbers.

The Caldwell sisters start each show season by picking a theme song they will play as they travel to shows.

Olivia has an additional superstition. Since winning the National Junior Summer Spectacular in 2012, she wears her now-lucky purple shirt to every show.

As with any other superstition, listening to that season's theme song doesn't guarantee the Caldwell sisters a spot in the first pen. But, it does always put the family in a good mood, which is sometimes just as important.

Ashtin and Nalaney Guyer

Ashtin Guyer's superstition isn't about what shirt she wears in the show ring; it's about the shirt the Robinson, Ill., native wears the night before.

"I always sleep in my shirt with my lucky number, seven, on it at shows," she says. "And then our pigs usually end up weighing something with a seven in it."

However, having a certain item with her while she's showing does matter to Guyer. At every show, she uses the same special whip. In fact, she's shown with one whip so much, she's had to break another one in.

"I used my first special whip so much I broke it, and I had to replace it," Guyer says.

Without that special whip in hand, Guyer comments she feels nervous in the ring.

Her sister, Nalaney, adds they also look for a little divine intervention.

"We always pray together before we go in the ring and while we're showing," she says.

The Guyer girls know that they won't be successful just from what they do at the show. They also put in a lot of time and hard work at home walking their pigs and getting them ready.

Parks Family

Many parents that grow up with livestock hope to pass on their love of animals and the tradition of showing to their children. Kym Parks, of Wilmington, Ohio, took it one step further when her children started showing hogs.

"I have a brush that I used, when I was in 4-H, that actually belonged to my uncles," Parks says.

"Somehow when I got married, that brush came along with me. When the kids started showing, the brush went with us, and now, it goes to every show."

The family knew the brush was special when at one show, it was the only brush available, and they had to use it. They ended up winning a few classes and decided it was because they had used the brush that day. The family now makes sure the brush is always with them.

"The brush is a long-term friend of ours," she says.

Their superstition was further proven the one day the brush didn't make the trip with them. Water buckets were knocked over, feed was spilled, everything that could go wrong did. It even affected the animals. They had a gilt that jumped off the loading dock, took off down an aisle and put up a fight to go in the show ring, which was unusual for that particular gilt.

"Her personality was definitely askew that day. Everybody in the barn knew we didn't have the brush," laughs Parks.

The brush was retired six or seven years ago when the bristles started to fall out, but it remains packed in the tack box, just to be safe.

Blake Danner

Some people believe that hanging a horseshoe above the doorway will bring good luck. Blake Danner of Chalmers, Ind., has a superstition about hanging something a little different around the house.

"I have to go to Palm Sunday and get four palms to hang in our house. This brings good luck to the show season ahead," Danner says.

The palms may be a good luck charm for the whole show season, but the Indiana State Fair has given Danner a couple more superstitions. Like Colvin and Caldwell, he too has a special component to his show-day wardrobe. However, he has found that it is not dependent on his shirt, but instead his socks. To do really well, Danner has to wear crazy colored socks. The family also always has to stay at the Martin House, a hotel in Indianapolis, before the show. This is something he picked up from his sister, Amara.

This brush is an old friend of the Parks Family and travels to every show.

"If I do all three of these things, I will have a champion at the Indiana State Fair," he says.

Even though Danner is a firm believer in his superstitions, if he doesn't do one of the three, it doesn't faze him too much in the show ring. Every time he shows, he has his game face on because he says his success really just comes down to how good his pigs are. Even so, having his superstitions is not something Danner finds unusual.

"All of my friends that show livestock have superstitions," he says. "It is just the way we do things."

Finding a penny heads up doesn't instantly make you rich, but most people will still pick it up because it might bring good luck. Sometimes it does, and sometimes it doesn't. In the same way, these showpig exhibitors know that following their superstitions won't instantly give them a champion title. But, unlike finding a penny, following their superstition does give them a guarantee. It is certain to give them an added boost of confidence and comfort in the show ring, which will get them much further than hoping for good luck to come their way.

Pay close attention to Blake Danner's wardrobe on show day.

SHOW MOM

Monthly

By Ann Fry

Dr. Jodi Sterle

Roland, Iowa

Husband: Steve

Children: Jake-14, Jackson-11

Favorite part of being a "Show Mom":

Spending time with my kids, not just on the road, but in the barn talking about pigs, diets, feeding programs, topics for speeches, etc. I also enjoy being involved in something bigger than us!

Activities your family enjoys outside of the show ring: Basketball, baseball, football and showing other species, like lambs and steers.

Item you would never leave for a show without: Ibuprofen and Band-Aids™, although we once left for the Summer Spectacular with the Border Collie accidentally in the trailer, and we once came to Louisville without Jackson's entire suitcase!

Your official "Show Mom" duties at home include: All things pigs - helping the boys manage their projects, advising on diet changes and talking about the positive points of each pig.

Proudest "Show Mom" moment: I have lots of them, and they are not always associated with a blue ribbon. I love watching my children grow and mature using pigs as a vehicle to build their character.

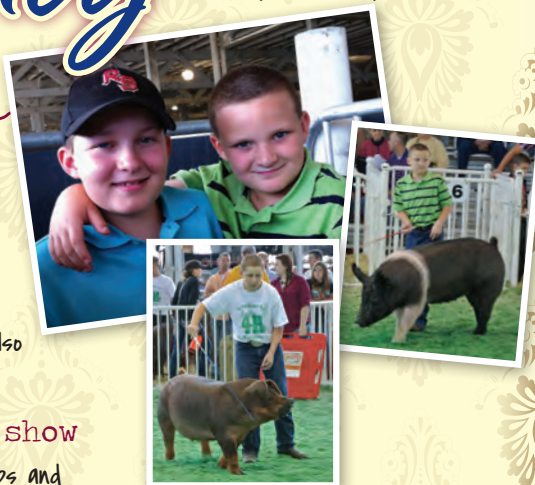

Trick to get or keep those show clothes clean: If you have them, tell me!

Your official "Show Mom" show day duties include: I'm usually in the ring announcing or working the show. The boys have learned lots of responsibility this way.

Your ability to drive a stock trailer is best described as: Forward is not a problem; if you want me to back, I can do it with lots of room, time and no yelling!

Best tip you can give to other "Show Moms": Remember, this is a great way to spend time with your kids! Don't be intimidated if you do not have knowledge about the actual pig; there are lots of ways to be involved. One way that the boys and I talk about their day is while we are in the barn watching the pigs eat, checking for illness or other issues. I have learned more about my boys while in the truck, either looking for pigs or going to shows, than any other time.

Recipe for life on the show road: When things get tense and tempers rise, my boys remind me to be "YouTube ready," and this often puts things back into perspective. Enjoy every moment.

From the Field

Brian Anderson, NSR Field Representative

This year's Winter Type Conference in Perry, Ga., started out plenty cold and slick due to an unusual winter blast that hit right during arrival, but it certainly didn't keep swine enthusiasts of all ages from making the trek to another wonderful hog show. Congratulations to all the juniors who participated in the Southeast Regional and brought such a wonderful set of hogs. You all are truly a joy to work with.

This year's Duroc show had lots of quality. Like many we have sold the last few years, I am sure we will hear from this set in the near future. Bret Goff of Indiana did an excellent job of working through the open show and giving his thoughts and opinions on an excellent set of hogs. Thanks, Bret, for your efforts and dedication to making red hogs better.

Dan's Durocs of Manito, Ill., led off Class 1 of the Duroc boar show. This son of MM2 Bases Loaded 28-1 was probably as good looking and attractive in his makeup as any boar in the show. He was very extended and really good legged. He was a nice way to lead off our Duroc boar show.

Class 2 was loaded with a deep set of red hogs that are sure to make a difference. Bill Range of Waterloo, Ill., led off the class with the Champion Duroc Boar. He was sired by HD1 SGLD Mammoth 108-4 and resembled his daddy in lots of ways. This boar was massive in the way he was built with power working from end to end. He had a huge blade and rib cage, while maintaining a neat, attractive look. This rascal will get a fair chance at Southern Gold in Indiana, and it might be a wise choice to call Bill and see just how fast you can get one bred to this WTC Champion. Bill Range also placed second in that class with the Reserve Champion Boar. He was sired by the Champion Duroc Boar at the WTC two years ago – RBTD1 Earthquake 54-1. This guy was very fundamental in his look and build and could go all day long. I thought he had a tremendous look and design. He is sure to stamp that same look and build in his progeny and will do an excellent job for young Garrett See of North Carolina. This was a great purchase by a longtime Duroc family. David Martin of Marion, Iowa, was third and fourth with a pair of RBTD1 Earthquake sons. The third-place boar had as much shape and squareness as any boar in the show. This one looked like a barrow-maker deluxe. The fourth-place boar was as heavy boned and stout featured as any in the show, but he was still flexible with a great red boar attitude, like most Martin red boars are known to have. Bailey Barnyard of Georgia will give him a fair chance.

The last class was won by Ashleigh Funkhouser and family of Indiana. This boar was a son of SMIB1 Royal Flush 2-2. What an incredible job Royal Flush has done, but this might have been as heavy-boned and rugged of a Flush son to date. This one had grow, power and mass. He was very unique in the way he blended it from end-to-end. He will stay in Georgia and go to work for Shannon Weston. The last boar I will discuss was second in the oldest class and shown by young Jessica Page of Georgia. He was probably the most intriguing hog in the whole show. This boar's momma was a Bold Ruler daughter from Doug Stewart that was Supreme Champion Female for Jessica at last year's Southeast Regional. He was sired by CAIN2 King 1-1. If you have been to Perry, Ga., you know they show on an AstroTurf surface that is not very forgiving. The surface never slowed this one down. He was truly one of the most flexible and athletic specimens I have seen of any color and is sure to make the next generation better for the Stickler boys in Illinois. This one needs to be inquired about for those serious about making progress.

The Duroc gilt show was full of quality, and Class 1 was led off by the eventual top-selling female. Trinity Taylor of Covington, Ind., drove her daughter of OGL1 PSSS Cherry Bomb 15-2 to class-winning status on both days. This one had the look of a barrow-maker. She was really square in her build and had tremendous shape from end to end, but handled it very well. She will get a fair chance for the Thomas Smith family of Indiana.

Class 2 was won by Jordan Schippert of Milford, Ill., and his daughter of TYAG2 PSSS Tenga 40-3. This gilt had a great Duroc look and was really stout featured and broody in her appearance. She was extended on both ends of her skeleton and read with lots of power and dimension. She is sure to make some noise for Bailey Barnyard of Georgia.

Amelia Meeker of Manito, Ill., won Class 3 with the Champion Bred-and-Owned female from the day before in the junior show. She was a daughter of GSSG2 GRUS Rock Candy 6-2. Typical of so many of the Meeker females, this one had a brood sow look. She was big bodied and productive and could flat handle herself on the go. At the end of the day, she ended up being the Reserve Champion Female in the open show and was the second top-selling gilt in the sale, going to Chad Day of Indiana.

Royal Farms of Georgia won the oldest class with a daughter of SMIB1 Royal Flush 2-2. She went on to be the Champion Duroc Female. This gal was really big footed, flexible, extra-tall fronted and extended in her kind. She will be an easy one for Emily Lyons of Florida to breed and make progress with. Congrats on a great purchase. Brandon Stickler of Illinois placed second in this powerful class. This gilt had put together a very successful show campaign, having been Champion Duroc Gilt at the Eastern Regional. A daughter of WTX2 XR Red Jacket 78-1, this gal will work for Bailey Barnyard who assembled a great set of breeding females in Perry, Ga.

This year's Premier Sire was SMIB1 Royal Flush 2-2 who is housed at Top Cut Genetics of Farmland, Ind., and the Reserve Premier Sire was CAIN2 King 1-1 of Cain Super Sires of Chariton, Iowa.

Thank you to Dave Mullins of Indiana for doing an excellent job of selling an elite set of purebred and crossbred hogs.

After Denver, Sioux Falls and the Winter Type Conference this looks to be an excellent year for red hog breeders. Good luck!

From the Field

Blaine Evans, NSR Field Representative

As most of us headed to Perry, Ga., with hopes of warmer weather and a great hog show, we found ourselves battling the same snow and ice that has plagued the Midwest for months. We did have a great hog show, though. A huge thank you to all of our exhibitors and folks at the show for being flexible and understanding with the circumstances.

This year, we asked Aimee Inskeep to, once again, judge the Hampshire breeding stock. I have had the opportunity to watch Aimee judge a few times, and one thing is certain: her passion and knowledge for this industry is unparalleled by most. Thank you, Aimee, for going a great job. Thanks also to her father, Terry Shaffer, for stepping in the ring to help.

We kicked off the Hampshire sale on Saturday evening with lot 1356-11 from Irwin, Ohio. Riley and Ethan Wendt's Champion Hampshire Boar was a son of BOLN1 Point Maker. As this hog drove into the sale ring, I couldn't get over his stout forearm, blade and skull. From there back, this guy was big bladed and opened up into a big rib cage and center body. His blade and cage set the stage for a tremendous amount of shape and dimension up high. When the boar drives away, he continues to impress with a wide pin set as he drops a true and square hind leg that travels within his skeleton. Having that sort of muscle is only good if the hog is built to handle it, and in this case, that is a fact. This guy's angles read right, and he didn't take a bad step all day. Premium Blend Genetics of Indiana brought this guy home for the price of $22,000.

Next in the ring was the George and Mike Watson entry, from Mooresville, Ind., lot 18-1, this year's Reserve Champion Boar. Mike's boar was out of GMW2 Hats Off. This boar won the youngest class of the day. In my opinion, this hog's better days are still yet to come. It's hard to make one as good from the side as this guy. His neck ties in high on the front side of his blade and from there back he proportions so well out of his blade all the way back to his hip. Showing on the surface at Perry, Ga., leaves no room for interpretation, and this hog went to the ground with the right set to his pasterns and great big, square toes. Ricky Lyons of Florida made a good buy at $1,000. It will be fun to see what this firm can do with this well-built, good-looking herdsire.

Earl Cain and family of Chariton, Iowa, drove their second place boar out of Class 2 into the ring next. This hog was one I thought had some good pieces. In terms of a boar that has a chance to make Hampshire hogs that are tall fronted, well balanced and good at the ground, this guy is as good as any. This son of EC2 Woodstock was a good buy for Bailey Barnyard of Georgia for an even $1,000.

Ryan Bell of Ohio brought the Long and Bell hog in the ring next, and he is one that I call extreme in a few areas. This is one heavy-structured, rugged-made kind of hog that opens up with a big blade and shapely back. This hog's rib rolled out of his blade big and bold, and that width remained constant any direction you wanted to study him. The Long and Bell entry was the second high-seller at $1,700, and he made the trip to McGuire Family Showpigs in Indiana.

We stared the Hampshire gilt sale with the Grand Champion entry from Sydney Cain of Iowa. The first thing that came to mind when this gilt hit the show ring was bold. Not only is she heavy structured and maternal bodied, but her skeleton is assembled correctly. She looks like a lady. This gilt looks like one that will be easy to mate and last for some time. Joe Lancaster took this gilt all the way back to Oklahoma for $2,100.

The Engler Family drove the Reserve Champion, this year, at the WTC. This daughter of MVLS2 GRUS Fort Knox is one that I label a brood sow in the making. Engler's gilt is one that isn't out there in any one area; she is simply basic and complete. The mother of this gilt is a true cornerstone at Engler's place, and I would say this particular gilt could be the same for Erik Bender of Indiana.

The Champion Gilt from the junior show was next in the ring. Congratulations to Cory Edge of Indiana on not only winning what was a very deep junior show, but also having the high-selling gilt at $5,000. Cory's gilt was able to drive to champion honors on a great skeleton with an attractive look from the side. Dondra Wining of Indiana has high hopes for this high-quality breeding piece.

Caleb Robinette of Pennsylvania drove the Class 1 winner into the sale ring next. This gilt is one that does everything a Hampshire female is supposed to do. Not only does this gilt have a great look from the side, but her center body and muscle shape are something to breed around. Nahunta Farms of North Carolina got a good buy at $850.

Thanks again to Aimee Inskeep for a great job of sorting the Hampshires. Also thanks to Col. Dave Mullins of Indiana for stepping in and selling all the hogs, this year, at the WTC. Thank you to all the exhibitors, bidders and buyers for making the 2014 Winter Type Conference a success.

Riley & Ethan Wendt's Champion Point Maker son topped the sale when he sold for $22,000 to Premium Blend Genetics.

From the Field

Michael, NSR Field Representative

The Premier Yorkshire Sire for the 2014 Winter Type Conference was awarded to HACO2 TCG Untouchable 153-6, owned by Top Cut Genetics of Farmland, Ind. The Reserve Premier Sire went to DVG2 Hair of the Dog 96-6, owned by Real McCoy Genetics of Bloomington, Ohio. Congratulations to both firms.

The Grand Champion Yorkshire Boar won the oldest class of the day. This son of TBRO1 Tightrope 92-1 is phenomenal from a design standpoint. He's extended ahead of his blade, tall fronted, level topped and has a great hip. He is big footed and heavy boned, sound in his movement and genuine at the ground. Plus, he has plenty of real muscle shape. Congratulations to Wynn Farms of Ashland, Ohio, on your winning entry. He will be housed at Shaffer's Gold Rush of Albany, Ind., for the price $1,300.

The Reserve Champion Boar was one of the interesting pieces that showed in Perry. This entry won the youngest class of the day from Heather Lynn Johnston of Washington Court House, Ohio. A son of DVG2 Hair of the Dog 96-6, he is big legged, stout skulled and heavy muscled. He is also sound on his feet and legs. This guy has a chance to sire winning barrows, if used right. He sold to Oliver Farms, Inc., of Reidsville, Ga., for $1,000.

The winning entry from Class 2 was next in the ring, exhibited by Isla Grande Farms of Marion, Ohio. This son of ARK0 Onslaught 35-3 is captivating from a design stand point. He's elevated at the top of his shoulder, level designed and long fronted. He's wide chested and square at the base of his chest floor with a big, expressive top.

The gilt show ran deep with quality and was sure fun to watch, this year. The gilt that found her way to the ring first is sired by ABD2 Here and Now 8-6, and, folks, this kind is hard to make. Paige Stahl's entry looks like a Yorkshire brood sow should. She is stout headed with big and even toes. She's square built underneath and has a big, soft rib cage. She is sound and functional on her feet and legs and has a great underline. She will make her way home to Morgan Miller of Greenville, Pa., for the price of $2,800.

The Reserve Grand Champion Gilt was driven by Brooks Royal of Fitzgerald, Ga. Brooks' gilt is also sired by ABD2 Here and Now 8-6. This lady is powerful in terms of muscle, bone and rib shape. She is big toed, square and wide at her knee and has a big hip. Coleman and Haley Rosson of Louisa, Va., paid $900 to take her home.

Ret Turner of Moultrie, Ga., hit the ring next with his Class 2 winning entry. This daughter of SRF1 Doc Holliday 2-8 looks like a show gilt. She is extended ahead of her blade, tall fronted and feminine. She is sound on her feet and legs and has a great underline. She sold to Holt Showpigs of Archer, Fla., for the price of $500.

Robin Ridge Farms and Mike Watson of Indiana drove their winning entry from the oldest class to the sale ring next. This daughter of HACO2 TCG Untouchable 153-6 was wide made, soft middled and very functional in her design. She also sold to Holt Showpigs of Archer, Fla., for the price of $1,100.

The gilt that won Class 4 was exhibited by Wynn Farms of Ashland, Ohio. This stout-made, feminine-designed gilt is sired by TMF1 Dumbo 35-3, and sold to Chad Martin of Flora, Ind., for $850.

Up next was the winning entry from Class 5, exhibited by Eddie Farms of Storm Lake, Iowa. Brad's gilt was sired by IGF2 Scenic Drive

5-8. If you were in need of a heavy-muscled, big-legged gilt that still has look, this lady was for you. She sold to Emil Clayton Lyons, Jr., of Glen St Mary, Fla., for $400.

The winning entry from the youngest class of the day made her way to the ring next shown by Carlyne Turner of Moultrie, Ga. Carlyne's gilt was sired by SRF2 Doc Logan 7-5. This lady was stout skulled, wide chested and sound. She sold to Gary Funkhouser of Wingate, Ind., for $450.

David Mullins, thank you, for stepping in on short notice to officiate the sale. Great job! This event is not an easy task to pull off; it takes a lot of help from a lot of people. Thanks to all of you! I wish you all the best of luck with your spring farrowing. See you at Belton.

Paige Stahl drove her Here and Now daughter to Champion honors in Perry. The gilt would return to Pennsylvania, after selling for $2,800 to Morgan Miller.

From the Field

Michael Lackey, NSR Field Representative

Snowy and cold weather greeted us when we arrived in Perry, Ga., for the 2014 Winter Type Conference. Storms in central Georgia made travel difficult, but we still had a great show.

David Mullins of Danville, Ind., stepped in to judge the crossbred show. He had a small, but high quality set of hogs to evaluate. David did a great job of looking at each entry, while still moving at a fast pace. Thank you, David, for a job well done!

Mindy and Madison Cook of Newark, Del., drove this year's Champion Crossbred Boar. Their boar was sired by Monster Quest. If you were in need of a great-designed, tall-fronted, level boar that has a good hip and rear leg, this guy would have been your kind. Plus, he has a big, square top and all kinds of muscle from behind. He will make his way home with Tim Arkfeld of Dunbar, Neb., for the price of $600.

The Reserve Champion Boar placed second behind the Champion in Class 2. He is sired by Gusto, and was exhibited by RAR Genetics of Aplington, Iowa. Rick and Ryan's boar has a shape to his rib. He is rugged in his build and looks like he has a chance to sire winning show barrows. This heavy muscled boar did not change ownership.

The next boar to sell was the entry from Eli Jones of Hull, Ga. Eli's boar is sired by Bone Chill, and he is square at the ground. He is bold and open in his chest, has a good center body and has plenty of muscle. He sold to Rusty Lee, Winder, Ga., for $400.

Next in the ring was the entry from George and Mike Watson of Mooresville, Ind. Mike's boar is sired by Fare and Square. This guy is big chested, square built, big ribbed and looks like a show hog. He was the high-selling crossbred boar at the price of $1,500 and will make his way to Poseyville, Ind., with Jayden Wehmer.

The Champion Crossbred Gilt was an entry out of the heaviest class exhibited by Jarvis Simmons and sired by The Monster. This 308 pound female was a monster! She's bold chested, huge ribbed, wide based and has tons of muscle. This lady looks like a show gilt and has great front feet. She sold to Oliver Farms, Inc., of Reidsville, Ga. They paid $1,700 to take this breeding piece home.

The Reserve Champion Gilt placed second in Class 4. She was from Thomas Trout of Huntington, Ind., and out of Shoot the Moon. This big-outlined, tall-fronted and level-hipped female can flat go. Plus, she has plenty of muscle and rib shape. This brood sow prospect will go to work for Dave Dickmeyer, of Troy, Mo., who paid $900 to take this female home.

Next in the ring was the winning entry from Class 2, exhibited by Megan Hediger of Greenville, Ill., and sired by a son of War Craft. You want to talk about a gilt that has all the basics covered, yet still has a great show ring look, this was her. She will also go on Dave Dickmeyer's trailer for the price of $550.

Jaydyn Wehmer of Poseyville, Ind., was in the ring next with a gilt that won Class 3. She is sired by Monster Pipe. This gilt is robust in her design, wide in her chest floor and can really reach out of her front end. She will go to work for Peters Hamps and Showpigs of Columbus, Ind., for $450.

Austin Joostberns of Dorr, Mich., was in the ring next with the winning entry from Class 1. Austin's gilt is sired by Freeze Frame. This feminine-designed lady has a great skeleton and can really motor. She sold to Kane Austin of Mt. Vernon, Ill., for $400

Thank you, David Mullins of Danville, Ind., for an excellent job serving as auctioneer. Thanks to everyone who helps with putting on the Winter Type Conference and Southeast Regional.

Jarvis Simmons' daughter of The Monster grabbed the Champion Crossbred Gilt banner at the Winter Type Conference. She sold to Oliver Farms, Inc., Ga.

Transfer the PEDIGREE!

A pedigree is more than a piece of paper – it's your word. It's a bond that says your breeding stock is a superior product, backed by quality genetics and predictable performance. So, after a sale, ensure that you continue that bond with your customers. Transfer your pedigrees in a timely manner. Not only does it record a history of official ownership, but it guarantees customer satisfaction and just might set the tone for repeat business.

The fourth edition of the NSR swine judging DVD is ready for your evaluation. This DVD is ideal for agriculture departments, 4-H livestock groups, FFA chapters or personal use. Designed to educate young people in performance traits, EPDs, indexes and swine evaluation, this DVD is for the beginner, but is challenging enough for the collegiate undergraduate as well.

Without papers, it's just another

PIG.

A performance pedigree is more than a piece of paper – it's your word. It says your breeding stock is a superior product backed by superior genetics and predictable performance.

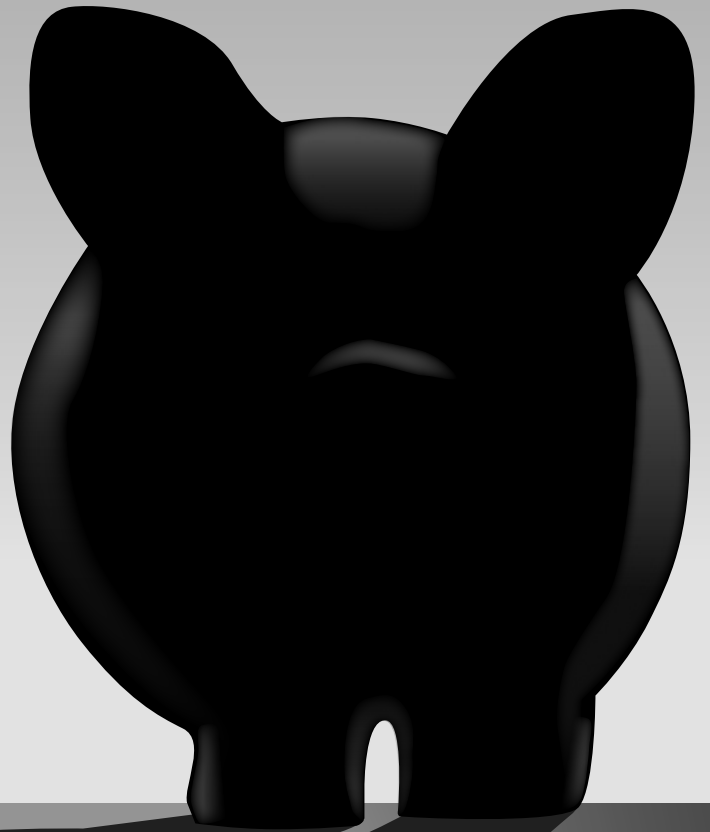

It sets purebred producers apart from those who pass common, ordinary pigs off as breeding stock. And, a pedigree is something else. It's the lifeblood of an entire industry, making it possible for you to have the leadership, research, programs, services and support you've come to expect from the National Swine Registry.

So, if you're raising and selling purebreds, you owe it to yourself to register every litter. If you purchase seedstock for your commercial operation, you owe it to yourself to ask for the performance pedigree. Why not take advantage of more than 100 years of genetic selection and performance documentation?

Get the pedigree.

DAN BAKER

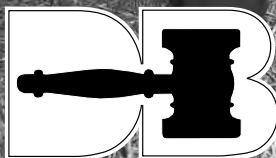

A U C T I O N E E R

Member of the Indiana and National Auctioneers Associations

In April 1964, I started my journey as a Spot fieldman. I was 20, broke and the Spots were broke too. So I had to furnish my own car and pay most of my expenses. My old 1959 Ford took me all over most of the eastern half of the USA, plus a few trips across the Mississippi. At the end of the year, I was still broke but "living the dream."

50 years later, I have a better car, and I am still "living the dream."

JGR Bred with a purpose!

BEB3 Tiger 9-6

(BOLN1 Point Maker 118-3
x JLM0 Tiger Blood 30-2)

I think this will turn out to be a very significant purchase for our Hampshire program. We have been trying to add more natural mass, and I will be very surprised if Tiger does not do that. This picture was taken at 9 months, and he has lost nothing after his first breeding season with 100% conception. He is massive shouldered and topped with a huge rump. With that said, he is very correct and athletic.

JGR3 Attraction 23-7

(LIBJ1 Distraction 4-6 x TBROO Turn On 30-1)

Attraction is one of those boars that looks good in his pen, then you let him out, and you go, "Wow!" He's really good. The closest comparison I can give is a Clydesdale. He is big boned and big footed with perfect toes and squareness. He can really reach and move off both ends. This photo was taken at 11 months of age.

JGR3 Intrigue 46-10

(JGR1 Pierce 25-6 x JGR0
Bootlegger 210-6)

This is one of the most intriguing boars we have ever retained. He is sired by Pierce (Rondo son) on a Bootlegger x Rondo x Big Easy x Tank dam. All boars with a very positive influence on our sow herd. He was to be my Fall Classic entry, but I just could not let him go. For all the mass and volume he has, he is very strong footed. Many York boars with this much mass and weight are showing signs of breaking down. This picture was taken at 10 months, and he is still going strong.

We love calls and visits! May God always bless you!

A special thanks to Ralph Doak for your dedicated service to the purebred swine industry and all the families involved. Here's to a successful "GATE" project!

REXWAL

His picture tells the story: heavy-boned, big-footed, huge toes, great hock and rear leg placement, deep-ribbed, athletic-moving, stout skull and head, great design and muscle. We have spent a lifetime looking for a Hampshire boar built like this one! Legendary sires represented include Point Taken, Augusta, Leverage, Sweet Tea, Quiet Giant, Blockbuster, Get Serious, Big Brother, Neat, The Judge, Payroll, Black Dice, and Mohican to name a few. Great sow families in his blood include Cicada, Jane, Linda, and Hillbelle.

What is Biosecurity?

Bi-o-se-cu-ri-ty (bahy-oh-si-kyoor-i-tee)

WHEN GREW UP

By Ann Fry

A year-long look at the staff of the National Swine Registry

After a less-than-pleasant field trip to a hog farm, Rhonda Eller never dreamed she would spend 33 years as the Yorkshire Secretary.

RHONDA ELLER

Yorkshire Secretary

As a single mom, in 1981, Rhonda Eller was in desperate need of a job. When she was sent to the American Yorkshire Club by an employment agency, she was not sure what to expect. One of her first experiences as Yorkshire Secretary was taking an office field trip to Twin Pine Farms in Ohio. An admitted city girl, this was not Eller's idea of fun. Once she got over the smell, she actually enjoyed herself, until the Yorkshire fieldmen tried to throw her in the farm family's pool. Eller was so afraid of the water and hung on to the fence around the pool so hard, she eventually broke a piece of the fence off.

Despite the rocky start, Eller has spent the last 33 years as Yorkshire Secretary entering litters, transferring papers, answering questions and doing whatever she can to get breeders their papers in a timely manner. She enjoys each and every day she gets to help someone, and she has developed relationships with many breeders over the years. With her retirement in May quickly approaching, Eller is looking forward to traveling with her husband and spending time with her family.

FAVORITE PART OF THE JOB:

"So much has changed since I first started, when all the work was entered manually. The one constant, in all my years, has been working with Robin. We've seen each other's kids grow up and have children of their own. We've shared many good and bad times, both professionally and personally. My leaving will not leave a void and my name will soon be forgotten, but I will leave with many memories of a job and its people whom I've spent half my life with. I've been truly blessed with the AYC/NSR for 33 years. It's time to move on to a new era and leave you in very capable hands. Thank you to everyone that has helped make my time as your Yorkshire Secretary so very rewarding. May God bless you, and as Ralph Doak said, 'It's been a great ride.'"

—Rhonda Eller

Jessica Goyette-Blankenship thought she would become a lawyer, until she started high school.

JESSICA GOYETTE-BLANKENSHIP

Duroc Secretary

Jessica Goyette-Blankenship imagined she would spend her days as an adult being a lawyer with a power suit and briefcase, defending her clients and standing up for justice. Until that time came, she was content to play with trucks in the dirt – no dolls – and pretend to be in the army. When high school rolled around, she traded her trucks and dirt for a volleyball on hard gym floors. And, she learned how long lawyers have to go to school.

Instead of pursuing a law degree, Goyette-Blankenship joined the National Swine Registry as the Duroc Secretary and receptionist, in 2001. Now, she spends her days transferring and registering pedigrees and processing other documents for Duroc breeders. She also keeps the office organized by taking care of Seedstock EDGE subscriptions, monitoring NSR sellable inventory, matching invoices with show entries and helping

FAVORITE PART OF THE JOB:

"I love talking with the breeders. I don't go to the shows, so my only interaction with them is on the phone or through email. It's funny to me that someone I talk to on a weekly basis could be standing right in front of me, and I would have no idea."

—Jessica Goyette-Blankenship

co-workers, as needed. In addition to all of this, she serves as the voice of the NSR, answering the phone and greeting visitors to the West Lafayette, Ind., office.

Outside of the office, Goyette-Blankenship and her husband are involved with a few Bible study groups and community service projects.
